

African American Young Ladies Summit (AAYLS)

Because Black Girls Matter.

Our Mission

To create holistic village practices that value, empower, and equip young women with the tools they will need for a lifelong journey of personal success and achievement.

Our Why

Because Black Girls Matter. Black girls are the most likely group of girls to self-identify as leaders and to seek leadership experience. * But because of institutionalized racism and sexism, they are disproportionately likely to experience trauma, they are less likely than their peers to graduate high school on time, and they comprise the fastest growing segment of the youth justice system. Girls of color deserve systems of care and empowerment that are specialized for their experiences, aspirations, and needs.

Our Story

Higher Learning U, and its primary program African American Young Ladies Summit (AAYLS), was founded in 2017 to connect, uplift, and empower Black girls in Denver Public Schools, and to foment youth-led solutions to address the systemic challenges girls of color face across Metro Denver. From an inaugural event, Higher Learning U has grown to host year-round global programming, answering the call from women and girls.

Our Difference
